This department is engaged in separating the sheep of advertising, and of the service which backs up advertising. from the goats-and hanging a bell on the goats. It invites letters describing experiences-pleasant or unpleasant-with advertisers, whether they be manufacturers, wholesale houses, retail stores or public service corporations. It will print those letters which seem to show most typically how an advertiser's deeds square with the words of his advertising. Only signed letters, giving the writer's address, will be read. But the name will be printed or withheld, as preferred. Address: The Ad-Visor, The Tribune, New York.

Big steres in every city have the matter of clean advertising largely a their hands. To be remembered because of clean, dependable adversising is the shortest known road to modern commercial success. Out of town papers please copy:

"Glass of hot lemonade every night before retiring, a simple but decisive blow. (The simple type of the cure spoils the seriousness of the ailment."

Attention is particularly directed to the logic of the sentence in parentheses. On that basis, why not make the cure even simpler? Probably if you simplified it to the point of doing nothing whatever you would deal the disease an absolutely annihilating blow. Certainly an odd way to sell lemons."

By all means. Eat enough of them and you'll be beyond the reach of any ill that flock is here to.

"Colery the Great Nerve Tonic," starts another of the "Nature's Own" series of remodies. From another we learn that John Adams Henry's "Vermont Maple Syrup" is not pure maple syrup. "It is better." says this slip; "it is searly pure, with a little pure rock candy syrup, which makes the fire-t combination yet put up.'

Then why call it Vermeet Maple Syrup? Then why call it Verreer't Maple Syrup?

The unfortunate part of thus ascribing picturesque qualities to regular vegetables is that all of Mr. Henry's slips have one very sound line:

"Nothing used for show-window purposes, subject to germ, dust or frost, or handled by prospective buyers until stale."

Why don't yer simply sell year good things for what they are, Mr. Henry, instead of mushing Dr. Musyon so hard? and Morton and Barrow Sts., New

MRS. LAURENCE A. MOREY.

Mrs. Morey's complaint was submitted to Bellas, Hess & Co., and a few days later the following was received from Mrs. Morey:

Regarding your letters of February 28 and March 5, would say that Bellas. Hess & Co. very promptly closed the account with me by aending wheth for the total amount and sending a letter of apology for the delay. Thank you.

MRS. LAURENCE A. MOREY.

Bellas, Hess & Co. have too good a record in adjusting complaints to let any customer feel as justly aggrieved as this Tribune reader did. If it weren't for our own knowledge of many cases where this house has made prompt and cheerful refunds, we should get the impression that Mrs. Morey had received the tiring-out treatment so popular with less reliable mail order houses. The holiday rush was the legitimate explanareliable mail order houses. The holiday rush was the legitimate explana-tion in this case. A SOUT three months ago I purchased a suit from the Lesiie Tailoring Company. The suit were well enough for a month or thereabouts, but a short time afterward the trousers began to wear threadbare, and, to add to my misfortune, while working in the office one day my coat was caught on a hook and a piece of cloth about four inches aquare was ripped out I inquired of several tailors as to the cost of repairing, and each price named was too steep for me. I sent hoth repairing, and each price named was too steep for me. I sent hoth root and trousers to the Leslie Tailoring Company, with the intention of paying for the cost of repairing the coat. In about a week I called for the suit, and, to my great surprise, I was handed a new pair of trousers, and the damage done to my coat was so skilfully repaired trousers, and the damage done to my coat was so skilfully repaired that it would take a very sharp eye to defect it. I asked the owner the price for mending the coat, and he told me that there would be no price for mending the coat, and he told me that there would be no cost whatsoever, and that I should call in a couple of days for the old cost whatsoever, and that I should call in a couple of days for the old cost whatsoever, and they were doing their best to repair. The Leslie people are always sure to have my custom and the custom of as many of my friende as I can direct to them. I GORDON CONWAY.
